

Albania Today

Albania, the country's principal port, still the outlet of the World War the only well-paved highway in the country linked these two cities.

The visitor to Tirana can acquire as souvenirs specimens of locally-made brass work, distinctive and beautiful embroidery done by the Tirana women and sold by them in the market places, and whether a smoker or not, he will wish to take along one of the city's and Tirana's famous pipes. The city covers a larger area than its 15,000 or so inhabitants would seem to need, judged by our standards. Yet one would have a difficult time finding a Tirana, with its cottage and garden, that a more verdant and more peaceful life would seem to need, judged by our standards. Goddess of Peace Is Busy in Many Lands—Kellogg Pact Is Proclaimed.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

THE goddess of peace, who has become familiar to all cross-world puzzles, was the star performer of the week. Her gracious presence was manifest in Washington, London, Paris, Rome, Mexico, and over in Manchuria she could be seen peering through the fast-flying war clouds. Our own National Peace Council, through the formal peace process, the Kellogg-Briand treaty for the renunciation of war as a national policy of the 61 nations that have declared their acceptance of the pact. In the East room of the White House were gathered the representatives of the former President Coolidge, former Secretary of State Kellogg, Senator Borah, and a few other invited guests. At the center of a long U-shaped table was the President, with Mr. Coolidge at his right. When the diplomats had entered while the Mariner band played, had been introduced and seated, Mr. Hoover arose, and in a rather caustic address, congratulated the assembly and the nations represented on the coming into force of this additional instrument of human endeavor to do away with war and to obtain by pacific means alone the settlement of international disputes. He expressed the thanks of the nation to Mr. Coolidge, Mr. Kellogg, Senator Borah and Representative Swann for their diplomatic skill, devotion and high service. The President then read his proclamation making the pact effective.

There were no other speeches, and the assemblage adjourned to the state dining room where luncheon was served. Mr. Hoover arose, and in a rather caustic address, congratulated the assembly and the nations represented on the coming into force of this additional instrument of human endeavor to do away with war and to obtain by pacific means alone the settlement of international disputes. He expressed the thanks of the nation to Mr. Coolidge, Mr. Kellogg, Senator Borah and Representative Swann for their diplomatic skill, devotion and high service. Visit To Appomattox

Today County Agents O. B. Ross, of Amherst, and John Whitehead, of Nelson, with several car loads of farmers from their counties will visit the pasture experiment conducted by the state on J. R. Hensley's farm, the surrender grounds where a picnic dinner is to be enjoyed and in the afternoon these farmers will look over the various crops on the experiment station and some commercial orchards here.

B. G. Anderson and R. B. Huggins will join the party at Concord Depot to show them through the county and lecture on the various experiments.

We welcome the farmers from two great counties to the fertile fields of Appomattox—the first smooth county East of the Blue Ridge, where milk and honey flows.

Whereas, the Secretary of War in his last report to congress recommended that there be erected at Old Appomattox, C. H., a memorial station, and that the conclusion of the war between the states, at a cost of $100,000.00, one which would be in keeping with the importance of the event, and Commissioner fees justified in stating that a quarantine against goods from Roanoke has been a drastic measure which has no practical value; and that, while it might be a point of caution to keep in quarantine for two weeks, that is to keep such children in the homes which they are visiting, he advises against any wholesale exclusion of adults, children or goods.

In every interview issued by an official of the State Health Department, credit has been given to the senator and zeal of the Roanoke Health Department, and the Roanoke newspaper, "Statement was made today by Dr. E. G. Williams, State Health Commissioner, that the health department is in a position to handle the infantile paralysis outbreak. It is rarely, if ever found that a health department, the daily press and the medical profession stand so thoroughly united in a well planned work to prevent the spread of disease in a community and to inform the people regarding the extent of the trouble. Roanoke is to be congratulated on this situation which, in its judgment, is being met by a great advertisement to the City and an economic asset to the future."

"It is probable that there are many, if not more, adult carriers than there children carriers although children are usually the ones affected by the disease. If it were to issue quarantine regulations against every county in which there is a case of polio, we would probably make the entire state stationary. If we could quarantine against flies, we would do a far better work than quarantine against people. If there are no flies to carry the disease germs from unsanitary places, the principal method of communication is stopped and if we can prevent, mouth and nose secretions from getting from the sick or carrier to the well, in addition to stopping fly transmission, we will do far more toward eradication of the disease than we can by quarantining regulations that could be adopted and enforced."

"The recorded experience of years shows," said the Commissioner, "that polio declines after a short period. We cannot hurry the advent of frost but we can do the only thing that does to stop the spread of the disease, and that is to kill the flies and so I say that a good slogan for Roanoke or any other place that wants to prevent polio is to Kill flies and Stop polio. This is our advice to communities: Sanitize, Kill flies, Observe health rules, and there will be no need to worry about quarantine."
